THE CATHOLIC FACT

Last week I visited the mission of the Fraternity of St Charles in Vienna. On Saturday afternoon, the priests there invited me to a conversation with Cardinal Schönborn, Archbishop of Vienna for almost thirty years, from 1996 to 2025.

Schönborn has been — and still is — a prominent figure in the Catholic Church. He was a Dominican professor of theology and wrote an important book on the life of Jesus; he helped Cardinal Ratzinger write the Catechism of the Catholic Church and worked closely with three popes: John Paul II, Benedict XVI, and Francis.

Now retired, the first question we asked him was: "How do you feel at the beginning of this new stage of your life? How are you living retirement?" His answer was both simple and inspiring: "I have never been retired before... so I'm just learning. The most important thing I'm learning is that conversion is always ahead. There are many books about retirement and aging well, but you don't learn these things by reading books. You need to live them."

The conversation then turned to the situation in Europe today. The leaders of the missions of the Fraternity of St Charles in Europe were also present. They shared stories of how fragmented the world seems: wars, religion often used as a weapon between nations, mass migration, and difficulties with integration.

He listened carefully to our stories and examples, and then, in a calm but firm voice, he said: "Europe needs the Catholic fact." He explained that the Catholic Church is a place where people from different cultures and backgrounds can meet, because the centre is not politics or finding agreements about current affairs. The centre is an event accessible to everyone: God became flesh and shared human life in all its aspects.

No matter where you come from, every human being carries in their heart the desire to see God. Catholicism says that there is a place where you can encounter what you, your friends, and every human being were made for: a companionship that helps you "dance with God," taking part in His work in the world, where everyone can find their own place.

The Catholic Church also proposes a vision of the human person that is rarely found elsewhere. The word Catholic comes from Greek and means, roughly, "open to the whole." The Church claims to be a place where every human being is seen in their totality — as a unity of mind, soul, and body; a work of art in which feelings, emotions, reason, desires, and the hunger for relationships are all interconnected and taken seriously.

I thought about the many times I have celebrated Mass in our parish and looked out at the congregation — so diverse, yet united. I realized that I was witnessing the Catholic fact with my own eyes. And I returned to England with a renewed desire to see this fact happening once again.
